

1nService CEO steps down to focus on growing participation in the Technology Convergence Movement

1nService CEO Paul Cronin resigns to focus on the leadership of IP Convergence across Industries.

Bellevue, Wash. – July 6, 2011 – 1nService, the leading network of advanced technology integrators with aggregate sales in excess of $1.5 billion, announces a change in leadership.

Paul Cronin, CEO of 1nService states, “Effective June 30, 2011, I have chosen to leave the formal post of CEO and President of 1nService. Although difficult, the decision was made due to my growing involvement with several Industry Leaders, which along with 1nService, align with my passion for transforming the way IT Solution Providers across all industries are preparing for IP convergence. It is an honor for me to share my leadership experience with the various Boards that are shaping the way their communities are transforming to meet their client’s future demands. These Boards include NSCA, PSA Security Education Advisory, Comptia 500 and several Vendor Advisory Boards. I will continue to share my cross industry knowledge as an educator and speaker at industry events while expanding my role at Atrion.”

As Paul leaves his official post at 1nService he will continue an active role in supporting and promoting the 1nService community and its global service delivery model. Paul will transition his role at 1nService to his long time business partner, Tim Hebert, CEO of Atrion Networking as they search for a successor.
